ADMINISTRATIVE AND LEGAL STATUS OF THE INSTITUTIONS OF A CIVIL SOCIETY AS THE SUBJECTS OF AN INTERRELATION WITH BODIES AND SUBDIVISIONS OF THE NATIONAL POLICE OF UKRAINE

Paper considers the administrative and legal status of civil society institutions as the subjects of an interaction with bodies and units of the National Police of Ukraine.

It is noted that despite the diversity of civil society institutions and their diverse patterns, they objectively contribute to the formation of a democratic and civil society and the interest of citizens in their interaction with the state. The state may create favorable conditions for the activities of civil society, form the legal basis for its activities, provide support to its institutions. At the same time, civil society can function without direct intervention of the state, but it is endowed with the function of "civil control" in relation to the state. In addition, it should be noted that each institution of a civil society has its own specificity of an interaction with the National Police of Ukraine in the field of protection of human rights and freedoms.

It is noted that public associations are organically related to public and, first of all, administrative and legal relations. Without taking them into account it's impossible to imagine the very organization of society, the mechanism of an implementation of democracy in Ukraine.

In addition, the factors influencing the administrative and legal status of citizens' associations are determined. The normative acts regulating the activity of public formations in Ukraine have been analyzed, which allowed establishing the main difference between their administrative and legal status and the administrative and legal status of state structures.

It is noted that the directions of cooperation between public organizations and police can not be completely defined in the legislation. However, they may be aimed at: participation in the development and review of programs, concepts, plans for the protection of law and order and the activities of the police; exchange of an information on the state of public order and public safety; training representatives of the police of the public on methods and forms of crime prevention; conduction of legal education with them; provision of methodical and other assistance in planning and accounting their activities; work with youth and children's organizations in carrying out joint activities aimed at an explanatory work on the prevention of offenses; the involvement of volunteers, journalists in covering the activities of the police, and so on.

On the basis of above mentioned, it should be recognized that the nature of the relationship between the police and public organizations is one of the most important indicators of the socio-political situation in the country. Therefore, the issue of establishing relations between civil society organizations and the police needs more attention, especially at the legislative level. Legislative consolidation of the forms of an interaction between police and non-governmental organizations will contribute to the development of this institution, the formation of a high level of trust in the activities of the police, and raising the level of legal culture of citizens.
